

Great Eastern Highway Bypass Interchanges, Hazelmere

Main Roads is planning for bridged interchanges at the intersections of Great Eastern Highway Bypass with Roe Highway and Abernethy Road, in Hazelmere.

What is the Great Eastern Highway Bypass Interchanges Project?

We are planning to build two new interchanges along Great Eastern Highway Bypass. The preliminary concept for the project includes:

- bridged interchanges at the intersections of Great Eastern Highway Bypass with Roe Highway and Abernethy Road
- upgrade of Great Eastern Highway Bypass between the new interchanges
- Lloyd Street connection north of Great Eastern Highway Bypass
- cul-de-sac of Stirling Crescent to the north and south of Great Eastern Highway bypass, with local access to be replaced by an extension of Adelaide Street to Abernethy Road, and

- shared path for riders and walkers, including lighting and barriers.

The Great Eastern Highway Bypass Interchanges project forms part of a package of projects that consider local roads and bridges in the cities of Swan and Kalamunda, including the extension of Lloyd Street to the north and the duplication of Abernethy Road to the south.

The Great Eastern Highway Bypass Interchanges project is jointly-funded by the Australian ($144 million) and Western Australian ($36 million) governments.

What happens during project planning and development?

Extensive planning and development work is underway to confirm the scope and to progress the various approvals to allow for road construction, including:

- stakeholder consultation to identify issues and constraints that may impact local road connections and intersection configurations within the Metropolitan Regional Scheme reservation
- geotechnical and site investigations, traffic and noise modelling and environmental assessments to inform environmental approval processes.

The results of these activities will inform the development of a final concept design and delivery schedule

How can you get involved?

To plan for the project, Main Roads is liaising with a range of key stakeholders, including the Public Transport Authority, local government authorities, Perth Airport and other government agencies to ensure our concept aligns with future planned development for local roads and rail.

We are also keen to hear from the local community to identify issues and opportunities as part of the planning process.
